

das - dialoghi artistici sperimentali, introduces:
ONE, TOO, FREE. Specchi, ombre, visioni
(ONE, TOO, FREE. Mirrors, shadows, visions)
Solo show by Alessandro Lupi

Bologna, 12th December 2019

From the 20th January to 28th March 2020, CUBO, the cultural space and the corporate museum of the Unipol Group in Bologna, will be holding the third edition of das - dialoghi artistici sperimentali (experimental artistic dialogues); a cultural exhibition project which has taken form as the perfect place for exchanging views – on content, techniques, and languages – among masters of contemporary art, already historicised, and representatives of the new generation.

ONE TOO FREE. Specchi ombre, visioni is the title of the personal exhibition of artist Alessandro Lupi (Genoa, 1975), curated by Ilaria Bignotti for das.03, Main project of ART CITY Bologna 2020 as part of Arte Fiera - the international modern and contemporary art fair held annually in Bologna.

Alessandro Lupi, an artist who exhibits his work at international level, has lived and worked for many years in Berlin. On the occasion of this Bologna-based project, which is also his first major Italian retrospective, Alessandro will be transforming the location of CUBO's Art Space (Spazio Arte) with four big site-specific art installations, uniting a space which has never been so closely intertwined with its surrounding environment.

Frammenti di realtà, designed and built by the artist in the months leading up to the exhibition opening, will be the external installation art which will greet the public before they even enter inside CUBO's Art Space venue. Here, depending on the time of day, the time of evening and on weather conditions, countless reflecting fragments loom in front of our gaze, stretching from the upper floors of the building to the green of the surrounding garden: delicate and challenging installation art, monumental and diaphanous. Moving and changing with the air and natural light.

Lupi's art flows with a continuous echo from outside to inside to outside, leading and inviting us inside the building of Art Space, where across the threshold there will be a further three art installations affecting the senses, in a journey of discovery and wonder, contemplation and action. Arranged on a podium, discordant images stand out against the small sculptures that generated them: the viewer, allured by the vision, activates an imaginative process while also trying to figure out the mechanism of such a distorted relationship between the clear image and its darker double: even the project's title itself, Ombre (Shadows), the art installation alludes to this ambiguous and intriguing connection. Seconds, the second installation art found inside the Art Space venue, is composed of sixty-one clocks placed on a wall: initially they move to an irregular rhythm and produce a disharmonious noise. Next, they align and create a precise redundant ticking: through the auditory and visual perception of the installation, the public reflect on time and on the mechanisms that control and determine it, salvaging and liberating a dimension of playfulness.

Antiego, the last artwork that completes the exhibition, is a mirror which denies us our reflection. Instead, we see who and what exists and moves around us in the reflective field. The title of the work holds its meaning: in modern times, where identity is multiple and virtual, 'I' is broken down and enslaved to its double, lethargically enslaved to social network in search for a temporary consensus. Lupi compels us to stop and re-find ourselves in others.

These are only some of the suggestions and reflections Alessandro Lupi's exhibition ignites, by means of an experiential and immersive path open to varying levels of interpretation, a research laboratory investigating major issues of the 21st century: the image and its double, time and space, the relationship of the individual with themselves and with others.

Over the years, Lupi has elaborated and developed different strands of research dedicated to site-specific interventions, kinetic and interactive. Lupi is behind each and every creative stage of his work, starting from the initial idea or invention that acts on the onlooker, stimulating their imagination, encouraging and exciting a different way of perceiving and shaping reality.
